ActiveEducation Partners with Western Governors University

Golden, CO -- ActiveEducation, Inc. (ActiveEducation), an innovator in the e-learning industry that provides training on the latest information technologies, announced today that its e-learning courses would be offered by Western Governors University (WGU). ActiveEducation courses will be mapped to a variety of competency tracks, so that learners can obtain certification or credit for what they have learned as part of a WGU degree program.

"We are excited to be partnering with WGU and offering our e-learning as part of their curriculum," said Mike Jossi, ActiveEducation founder. "WGU is the first virtual university to blend traditional university distance learning programs with courses from publishers like ActiveEducation into one comprehensive offering."

Dan Eastmond, WGU's director of learning resources, concurred. "The WGU competency-based learning model allows us to present our learners with the best coursework from traditional academia, outstanding publishers, or other education providers. We are pleased to add ActiveEducation's e-learning to our course catalog. Each course includes interactive exercises and a tailored approach that provides learners with a comprehensive, engaging, and efficient way to gain the knowledge they need."

ActiveEducation's courses are already available on the WGU Web site and are currently being mapped to WGU's competency-degree programs.
